

TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

I chose to be a teacher especially for special education because I was inspired by a young teacher from Twitter who shared his moments with his special needs students every day. Starting from that, I always followed up with the young teacher to learn more about special education. Since it is my passion, I decided to continue my degree in special education. I know being an educator is not a simple thing particularly in special education. I have to understand the students and encourage them that they can also do anything that they love. My parents strongly supported my dream of being a special education teacher since my father was also a teacher. Therefore, I will do my best to be a good teacher in the future.

My teaching philosophy is that I want to create enjoyable and active learning experiences for students and teachers. I want to use behavioural theory in my class to make sure that they act behaviorally in my class. For example, I would like to give a gift or praise to the student if they can answer all my questions. As a result, it will make them happy when entering my class. Other than that, my teaching goal is to increase my students' proficiency in using the target language, enabling them to communicate their ideas effectively and express their own meaning. Being a teacher has always been an ambition of mine. I hope I will be a great and successful teacher one day.
